keep you on your toes throughout the game

Cells sensitive to hydrostatic pressure: origin and role in cochlear partition specification in Drosophila. We report that Drosophila auditory neuroblasts (AN) can sense the pressure gradient across the otic vesicle (OV), and cells with this sensitivity are located in a specific region of the OV. We observe that the otic placode is preformed in a compact form prior to hatching and begin to divide and then migrate outward with the contour of the anterior half of the OV. With the initial migration complete, a population of ANs sensitive to pressure locate in the midventral OV. They remain in this midventral position throughout larval life, but move to a ventrolateral position at later stages. Sensory cells sensitive to hydrostatic pressure (HP) are present in all the dorsolateral OV regions at all stages. These cells are necessary for the proper early shaping of the cochlea. A mutation in the hairy gene (h), which prevents the differentiation of sensory organs in other systems, affects ANs located in the midventral region of the OV, specifically the prospective internal auditory ganglion (IAG). Our results suggest a model for the location of ANs in the OV. Sensory precursors are induced in the dorsal-most region of the otic vesicle to begin the process of organogenesis. Next, these precursors are made into multiciliated otic sensory neurons, a process that requires input from a population of AN cells in the midventral region of the OV. The midventral

What's New: New Goddesses: Elilial - Goddess of the Silver Thread, she is said to be the "dark one". She introduces herself as "What's the most important aspect of something? The mind that can't see it." She deals in matters of the dark, or rather, shadows. She is sought after by those who wish to test their own mental capability, and is not known to be very friendly. She doesn't really care whether her disciples live or die, so long as they enjoy themselves in the meantime. Elilial serves as the ultimate enforcer of justice, going so far as to destroy all enemies that dared to defame her homeland. Kuragehime - Goddess of the Red Thread. She is kind of a step-sister to Elilial, but even she can't help but feel a little bit proud that she is actually the one who defeated the enemy. In fact, she despises any behavior that is cruel, regardless of the distance. And she is surprisingly gentle and feminine in appearance. Manatsu - Goddess of the Green Thread. She is made up of energy, and she considers herself a messenger. She hopes to be of service to others. She's known to be incredibly friendly, and can even go as far as to be extremely perky. No matter how many times she meets someone, she is at once impressed and worried about the person. Nevelia - Goddess of the Orange Thread. Her symbol is known to be a heart, while her slogan is "Love is the enemy of (her) enemies". She is a sword wielding machine, and her signature moves are " d41b202975
