
angiotensin-converting enzyme inhibitors were more likely to have undergone revascularization of the left anterior descending coronary artery. Patients on vasodilators were more likely to have diabetes, and patients on diuretics were more likely to have hypertension. Among anti-arrhythmics, patients treated with disopyramide were older and had greater left ventricular dysfunction. Of the patients with calcium channel antagonists, 7% had coronary artery disease, compared with 0.8% of patients treated with other agents. The present invention relates to a multi-cylinder reciprocating fluid compressor including a drive motor such as a diesel engine, and more particularly, it relates to a compressor of the type wherein a crankshaft is rotatably supported in a casing. A general-purpose compressor as disclosed, for example, in Japanese Utility Model Unexamined Publication No. 60-46942 comprises a casing having a horizontally oriented drive motor mounted therein, and a crankshaft coupled to the motor. In the compressor of such type, a crankpin of the crankshaft and a cam shaft coupled to the motor are disposed in a horizontal direction. In addition, a main shaft coupled to a rotatable vane compressing cylinder (hereinafter referred to as "a vane cylinder") extends in a vertical direction. In order to decrease an imbalance of radial forces applied to the motor, the compressor includes a balance weight disposed between a right end portion of a crankpin and a right end portion of the cam shaft 6d1f23a050
