Patients with suspected pulmonary or laryngeal conditions rarely present with a prolonged, productive cough, and many do not seek medical evaluation. With bronchoscopy and transnasal administration of lidocaine, we offer the first demonstration in the literature of a safe, effective, and practical outpatient approach to treating such patients. Fifteen patients with chronic cough underwent flexible bronchoscopy with propofol sedation. After a diagnostic examination with lidocaine and bronchial brushings, 7 patients were treated medically, and an additional 8 patients were treated with chemical or thermal ablation. Sixteen of 16 patients reported subjective relief of cough symptoms within minutes of the procedure. No bleeding occurred and no patient required emergent care. No patient had profound bradycardia, hypotension, oxygen desaturation, chest pain or other complications. All patients who had obtained treatment of cough-provoking lesions had persistent resolution of their symptoms for several months, with 3/8 (38%) of patients being completely asymptomatic at an average of 2 months later. Propofol sedation is a safe and effective option for transnasal bronchoscopic examination and ablation of cough-provoking lesions in patients unable to tolerate or who refuse general anesthesia.Q: Should we call the sun 'the' star or 'a' star? In Japan we're used to there being one sun for the main character in

"It's the death rattle of the world's most powerful democracy" - editor's choice is a short and unabridged translation of this Czech movie from the 1970s about one of the most controversial cases of that time when a Czechoslovak journalist and his Czech colleague could be tried and sentenced to jail because they had published some text critical of Mr. Honecker, the Communist Party leader of East Germany. "Actualités" - another Czech movie that was banned in the Soviet bloc till it was re-released in the 1990s. An educated American runs afoul of the KGB because he has selected a new case of Soviet espionage, a KGB agent who is presumably working in a US intelligence agency. "Eliminated" - in 1972 Czechoslovak authorities immediately banned this rare independent movie by film critic and director Jan Kadrnal, who was sentenced to 14 years in jail. It tells the true story of the first of the independent Czechoslovak movies that were filmed with a professional film crew (of Czechoslovak and German owners) - "Separate ways" starring, among others, František Kubík, František Zeman, Jan Blažej, and Jiří Menzel. This was one of the first films to criticize the regime. "Silence at
