2001-075834, filed on Mar. 10, 2001, the contents of which are incorporated herein by reference. The present invention relates to a power supply circuit for supplying power to an automotive vehicle, and more particularly to a power supply circuit which outputs auxiliary power for starting an engine of an electric car. An engine of an electric car is started by receiving power from an engine starter which is operated with a high voltage. For this purpose, an ignition coil is disposed in the path of the starting current for starting the engine, and the ignition coil is connected with a power supply circuit which outputs power to the engine starter. A power supply circuit for starting an engine is disclosed in, for example, Japanese Patent Publication No. SHO 60-3198 and Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open No. HEI 8-318591. The power supply circuit disclosed in these publications includes an oscillating circuit which outputs an oscillating signal in synchronism with the rotation of an engine, an oscillating circuit which supplies power to an engine starter in response to the oscillating signal, and an electric motor which is coupled with an engine starter to start the engine. The power supply circuit disclosed in the above publications also includes a circuit which is utilized for starting an engine so as to charge a battery by utilizing a voltage generated across the secondary winding of a reactor when starting an engine. In recent years, there have been developed electric cars without using a conventional engine starter and ignition coil. Consequently, there is not enough room for installing an ignition coil to allow power to be supplied to an engine
