Regarding fonts, you will need two or more fonts. For example, if you will be using Times as the principal font in your serial, you should include Times Roman. As we are not in control of the fonts that are stored in the e-serials database, you need to provide the font for the main text. You will need a Type 1 version (which normally contains only characters of the Latin alphabet) and a Unicode version (which is a universal language support text) of the same font. For example, if the font name is Times, the Type 1 version is Times New Roman and the Unicode version is Times NT. The database searches for any fonts other than Times, so you must provide the same fonts in both the Type 1 and Unicode versions. If you have already registered for an ISSN, but your serial will be published after the registration deadline, you may continue the registration process for your serial after the registration deadline. You will be added to the list of existing publishers. The registration deadline for new serial registrants will be passed on in a notice sent to you by email. If you are unable to register after the deadline, your serial will not be registered. A: We now offer users the ability to search our electronic resources of serials on diskettes or CD-ROM in addition to electronic serials available online. Users will be able to search for over 900 subject areas as well as serials published prior to the 1990's. If a user is unable to use our link resolver (Hub) to link to the serial, Ulrich's does not have the necessary hardware or software to access the serial, or the user has not provided us with any instructions to access the serial online, the user will be provided with the serial's serial number for reference to the publisher or publisher's electronic serial identifier (ISSN or EISSN). The serial number or e-serials identifier may be used in conjunction with Ulrichsweb.com to access the serial electronically or through an aggregator or other tools. Similarly, if the user is unable to access the serial with the link resolver, our web links allow the user to access the serial in ULRich's free system. If the serial has a provider-issued certificate of compliance, the serial number may be used to access the serial through the provider's aggregator, link resolver or other program.

ISSN 1748-8380 for this serial is valid from 2000 to 2003. This is a crucial point. ISSN 1748-8380 is not a number-based ISSN but an identification ISSN. The numbering scheme is 15 numbers long, beginning with 785. For example: ISSN 1748-8380 = 785-000-102-7. The serial number is prefixed by the lowercase ISSN letters for the year of first publication. In this example, ISSN 1748-8380 is the first edition of "Histories of Animals and Plants." Each time the ISSN number is changed, a new application form is required, the next one being probably sent in July/August 2004. In order to facilitate the ISSN assignment, the online submission system will automatically change the ISSN for submissions as part of the upload process. To retrieve the current information on your serial, please go to the e-serial Serials page at http://www.asc.upenn.edu/cgi-bin/e-serial/index.cgi?cas. The correct e-serial is http://www.asc.upenn.edu/cgi-bin/e-serial/index.cgi?cas. for the serial "The Smallholder." The e-serial number is available for download along with a form so the number need not be provided on the application. Online subscription is available for $300 per year. Some publishers require a title page that includes a reference or cross-reference. We suggest that you include a page with the title, the volume and serial number of the serial as well as the

ISSN number. In the title page, we would like you to include three-to-five words describing the serial. On the application, please provide the title and words. Here you may also include as much other information as you wish. For example, if you are submitting a reprint of a copyrighted work, you may include the copyright notice. What may be helpful to us is an abstract of the work in English. 5ec8ef588b
