later, team flash learned from barry about garrick's involuntary return from the speed force prison, and sought out garrick for help in finding cisco and caitlin. with garrick's help, they found cisco in central city while caitlin was in starling city, where she was being treated after her powers from killer frost temporarily returned. while the four searched for the two who had previously been separated, joe west informed barry about the many deaths of speedsters over the years. barry blamed himself for those deaths as he felt he was responsible for what had happened to jay and the rest of the speedsters in the future but he ultimately realized that, like jay, they had no choice in deciding whether or not to come to the future and changed his own actions to avoid that happening. thus, barry decided to use all of his power to save a future where jay had perished and he was being blamed for it but was ultimately successful in doing so. as team flash prepared to return home, barry told jay, sally, harry, garrick, cisco and caitlin that their suffering was worth it since jay's resurrection would prevent the deaths of innocent people. he further stated that he didn't know what happened to them in the future to make jay think that sacrificing himself would result in such a horrific chain of events but jay later told barry that he believed that his death would result in the death of someone close to him. he thus decided to return to the future in order to prevent jay's death. in the past, kid flash told barry that jay would see his actions in the future and thus jay realized that the reason jay was unable to save himself was because he had died in the future, hence he decided to sacrifice himself so that jay would be able to survive in the future.

Crimson J Girl Fight 3 Flash

flashpoint's main villain, savitar, was on one of his many forays, searching for the speed force-powered teen titans. savitar caught a bad break when two salvaged c-batteries became separated from the cell in which he was kept, and a third found its way into the hands of the last villain to escape his dungeon, killer frost, who was using it to reverse-engineer a space-time engine. using a time machine, savitar used the flashpoint crisis to track down the missing cell, only to discover that it had been attached to the corpse of the flash of earth-1, jay garrick. savitar thought he could use garrick, and something that had resided within him before going to prison, to cheat time into working for him, and on the very first day that the speed force freed jay and took his helmet back, savitar started to question whether he had been right. garrick then tried to flee savitar's army, but he was cornered by wonder woman, who happened to be visiting earth-1 during flashpoint, but had been brought there by reverse-flash. both rivals exchanged blows before jay tried to take her helmet to use to communicate with her, but savitar saw his opportunity and seized it. flashpoint ended, savitar went out on the rampage, and he found the helmet more than equal to its task. he returned to his troops, only to discover the team had been turned against him by his former ally, caitlin snow. taking the opportunity, he seized control of the white martians, who were to act as savitar's personal valets, and headed to central city to face the flash himself. facing the combined might of the flash and wonder woman in his new,, flashy armor, savitar proved unstoppable, though even with increased speed, he was unable to beat flash or the latter's alliance. savitar then went to destroy the justice league, knowing the flash would come to their aid. however, after saving the city, the flash became weary of acting as savitar's sidekick, and this was the point where his resolve started to falter; at that moment, savitar shot flashpoint barry allen, killing him. savitar then found the remains of a c-4 charge and used it to destroy the man of steel, wonder woman and the batwoman. jay was horrified by his actions, something he had always thought was impossible. flashpoint was cancelled, the flash regained his normal powers and ability, and the white martians, in their lasciviousness, elected him the new leader. he claimed he owed the entire multiverse an apology.
