states with the highest population growth per thousand were maharashtra, up and bihar where population has increased by 4.1% per thousand, followed by west bengal (3.4%), madhya pradesh (3.2%), and gujarat (3.1%). the idp population growth projection for 2016-2032 is

1.6% (0.4% per annum), or 19.8 million. this projection is similar to the 2007–2027 idp population growth projection of 1.1 million. however, the expansion in the 2007–2027 projection was largely due to the inclusion of children under 5. the 2016–2032 projection does not include children under 5. yet, the majority of the projects still have only one livelihood alternative, and this was the case for 45% of project households in 2016. the large majority of project households continue to have at least two livelihood alternatives, with 47% reporting one alternative and 38% reporting two livelihood alternatives in 2016. project households that had at least two livelihood alternatives reported lower levels of success than did those with one livelihood alternative (see box on page v) the number of people who are employed in agriculture is projected to drop from 285 million in 2000 to 280 million in 2013. this is primarily due to the effects of high population growth and declining agricultural productivity, which has led to a decline in the number of people engaged in agriculture and their productivity. productivity (i.e., value added) per person employed in agriculture increased by 7% per year from 2000 to 2013. in 2000, nearly three-quarters of the indian labor force (or 768 million people) was engaged in agriculture, but by 2013, just over half (or 595 million people) was engaged in agriculture and the share of the labor force engaged in agriculture is projected to drop to 485 million by 2013. 5ec8ef588b
