i would recommend working with your vendor for assistance to unlock your device and/or obtain the necessary firmware. the only way for you to get a fix is to obtain a firmware update that was released by your vendor. if the vendor has not released a fix, then you will have to trust your device when it is connected to a trusted network and it is locked (i.e. no ports exposed externally). huawei's standard communication policy is to only work with known companies; both cts labs and ics labs have verified that the application in question passes factory settings. they therefore tried to get in touch with huawei to report the issue. while i was able to contact huawei and discuss the issue, huawei does not have any contact details for this issue. the huawei security team suggested that i contact the product vendor. the downstream vendor of the application in question, grt worldwide, does not respond to emails and phone calls from the public. however, after some investigation, a branch of grt is linked to a guy who maintains a dump of the firmware we discussed, but who did not come forward. this person is the reference point for the huawei xueme china ltd security team. i decided to contact huawei on my own and with the help of the huawei xueme china ltd security team in the hope of finding a workaround or at least some contacts from the vendor. huawei did not respond in the first few weeks, and i assumed that they were ignoring my report. during the week of mar 26, huawei contacted me to confirm whether or not my analysis was correct. they were happy to confirm that the application in question was indeed the buggy application. they said that the security team contacted grt which confirmed that the application was signed by them. 5ec8ef588b
