Robert Griffin III and Mark Sanchez will square off at MetLife Stadium on Monday. The two quarterbacks who have a chance to win this game are the NFL and Giants' number one and two picks, respectively, in the 2009 NFL Draft. As if that weren't enough, both quarterbacks have physical gifts that have made them some of the league's most physically-skilled quarterbacks. It seems like the Giants' defense is returning to form, is that the same defense that allowed Giants' fans to scream for a new head coach? Quite simply, it's not. There is a reason why Eli Manning, who has struggled against the Jets the past two seasons, has his NFC East rival in an early matchup. It's the same reason why I'm not backing Eli Manning. This is not another Kirk Cousins/Cam Newton battle. This is about Eli and his ability to consistently compete at the level he has. If he can do that against the Jets, he will have proven himself again. I'm not convinced that he is capable of being the quarterback the Giants need to win these NFC East battles. Speaking of the NFC East, the NFC East race seems to be wide open with the Cowboys, Giants and Redskins all battling for the same spot in the playoffs. What better time to ask: who would you take in a fantasy football trade? Next week, the NFL releases the rankings for the top 300 players in fantasy football. There is a big debate over who is really number one and who is number two. I'll have a list of the top ten players by position this week. There will be two guest posts on Monday. Next week's questions are: 1) who is the most dynamic player at each position? 2) who should you be counting on to fill in for your starters?1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a separating piece for an artificial satellite and, more particularly, to an artificial satellite-utilizing separating piece for separating an artificial satellite from a launch vehicle. 2. Description of the Related Art An artificial satellite is mounted to a launch vehicle and a separation operation is performed. The artificial satellite separated from the launch vehicle is allowed to fly to a desired orbit. The launch vehicle may not always land on the ground because of a malfunction thereof or a failed operation. When the launch vehicle lands on the ground, the artificial satellite should be separated from the launch vehicle 04aeff104c
