Can I simply uninstall and reinstall the OS to get rid of all the settings or is there a more "elegant" way? A: Yes, there is only one way to clear your settings, by restarting your computer. This means that you cannot clean up settings in any other way. If you do not reboot you will be left with a ton of old settings that are not compatible with newer versions of Windows. On the go and no time to finish that story right now? Your News is the place for you to save content to read later from any device. Register with us and content you save will appear here so you can access them to read later. While the best-laid plans often go awry, the plan that saw most of New Zealand's original native species wiped out by European settlers during the 1800s was a remarkably successful one. And while it's well known that humans were responsible for extinctions before Europeans colonised New Zealand, it's less well-known that the ultimate cause was the increase in economic activity to which we are all subjected in the modern day. According to long-time conservationist Professor Peter Stewart, the full extent of the impact of Europeans' activities is still being realised by modern science. Professor Stewart has spent the past four decades working with and for the people of this country, and his strong relationships with different tribes and communities have allowed him to see the underlying causes of extinctions that most New Zealand
