I love this new feature. Like many of you, I've been so excited about making the change from CS4 to 6 that any further delays have been hard to swallow. As I've progressed, I've become less enthusiastic about some of the new features, especially CC. But this one is a game changer for me. It's maybe no surprise to anyone that I'm a frequent user of PS, but I've found little, if any, fulfillment, new features or no-obligation trials of PS CS6 to be as comprehensive as the latest features. This is an incredible step forward for me and I've ordered the upgrade immediately. This view of the last command screenshot of "More Options..." for the PS Photo, Tilt Shift and Grid tools is what got me into PS. Seems like I was using PS for 3-4 years without even knowing it. I can see myself returning to a more streamlined CS3 level after using 6 for so long. From what I saw so far, the upgrade is a necessary one just as it is for anybody using the cloud version of Lightroom. Losing access to the tools provided when you work in the cloud is a problem that needs to be addressed and one that is not exactly new to Lightroom CC. It is very annoying as it sometimes impacts the workflows you have developed. I was able to verify that the issues have not been improved, however. The service is still unreliable when it comes to syncing the catalog, which makes it difficult for users to start or stop the workflow. Similarly, the ability to earn and redeem IDEs are still limited for those who are using the free cloud service. I think that Adobe needs to consider how important the service is and optimize the software in a way that enables people to use it fully. The service should not suffer the performance issues that we experienced.
