Upgrading to Lightroom 5.2 makes me feel three year behind but I really like what I see. I especially like the different preview views (Smart previews seem to be a huge speed/quality boost for the person using the camera) and I look forward to seeing more features in the future. What I would like to see is if there is a spot to add more network web resources to your library (could be a full URL, a tag, or just adding your web-image feed). The Mac client is great, but still nice to have an app on iOS and Windows. I have had to downgrade to light room 5.2 as it performance was not good after updating to new version. what i found is that light room after updating slow down performance and smallest images are not normal size. Is there a way to get the Lightroom side panel back? I cannot figure out how to do this and I think this is really killing me. It is crazy how they removed all of this and are now just saying it is integrated into Photoshop! The fact that they removed the ability to focus on individual layers (panels) was a big loss in my book. But I guess that is why So many people use Photoshop Elements. Still, it would be nice to see the maintained panels that are included in the Editor version. That would allow them to keep the panels and the panels options available for inclusion in the Solarized app. If they did that, I think it would quell some of the complaints about the fact that the panels are now gone in Elements. Why are the Lightroom app and the touch versions called the same thing? Lightroom 5 is not the same as lightroom 5 touch. I would expect to name them something, like Lightroom 5 Editor and Touch 5.2. They are in the same application and the differences between them are not that obvious. They have the same user interface, but Lightroom 5 Editor has the regular UI, whereas Word Touch 5.2 has the touch screen UI.

So how do you remove just the tiles? Here's a short video that explains how. As for me and my mates, we use Photoshop on a regular basis.
