Using this edit workspace, users can focus on editing while their collaborators can Preview and Iterate without leaving Photoshop. As the collaborator uploads images to a Share link, Adobe works out the matching process with the "edit" client using Adobe Sensei. "Earlier we introduced Editor for Review, allowing greater collaboration," said Brown. "Now with Edit for Review, users can work on finishing images while collaborating and being updated in real time when other users are viewing their images, including changing selection accuracy." Another key feature for this release is the ability for designers and artists to work across devices from anywhere, as long as they have a good network connection. Besides the vastly improved system performance, downloading of files from the cloud is now faster, and updates are much more seamless. The new updates also have an interesting story behind it. While releasing the new feature updates, Adobe has been slowly transferring the internal team that was handling Photoshop to a new sub-unit within the Electronic Arts team, the "Electronic Arts Creative Design and Development" group. This new group will start to release the first fruits of the new bridge between Substance and Photoshop at the beginning of next year, and will be used as the basis for the next round of massive updates to Adobe Photoshop. All this may mean faster adoption of new features across the pipeline and a more cohesive way of working for Adobe. Adobe has set its sights on the future of digital photography for its new features. Photoshop will bring forward some of the best features of the innovative Olympus cameras as well as the latest from Canon's top-level offerings. There's also the legacy of the Canon 10D and the occasional sense of nostalgia when using old features from the EOS film days. Finally, with each release, Adobe brings in new features to its operation. These include plug-ins for the major compositing and editing software such as After Effects, and the introduction of the all-new Service Fabric software platform. The service fabric, which has been around for a few years, is designed to run the entire Photoshop workflow on a single network fabric and would dramatically clean up the way Photoshop accesses and sends data to each other.
