Story highlights Nigel Farage says he won't stand down from Brexit Party, despite failing to win MEP spot UK election: May 10, 8 PM local time (10:00 GMT) Norfolk: Farage backs May's minority government to deliver Brexit UK election: Latest polls put the Tories at a new low Brexit Party leader Nigel Farage says he won't stand down as leader of the party, despite failing to get a UK parliamentary seat in last month's election. Farage told a UK newspaper Monday he had chosen to "stand and fight" his party's "biggest fight yet." "We've a message, we've a strategy for Brexit, we've been fighting against a party that have no message, no strategy, and no way forward, which is May's Conservatives," Farage told the Daily Telegraph. Britain's election: Every seat to vote "So we stand and fight against them." UK election: Every seat to vote May is expected to seek an emergency Brexit extension from the European Union in the coming week, according to the Guardian newspaper. Lawmakers voted Sunday to delay the UK's exit from the European Union until June 30, citing lack of clarity from the EU on the terms of a new delay. If the government is unable to convince the EU, Britain will have to leave the bloc without a deal. Farage was the leader of the UK Independence Party (UKIP) until he stepped down in September 2018 to run for the European Parliament. He won the Brexit Party's only seat in the December election in the English city of Stoke-on-Trent, as he promised to take Britain out of the EU, the paper reported. But he failed to win a UK House of Commons seat, and announced his resignation Monday.
