AppleInsider has learned that multiple enterprises and customers have been attacked by hackers previously believed to be from the Chinese government, resulting in the deployment of exploits on new iOS devices, such as the iPhone 5s, iPhone 5c, iPhone 4s and iPad 2. With the new Share for Review tool, users can share the entire project without leaving the editing experience. Artists can use the editor to play back the effects they've created and visually review and refine their work before sharing it back to their team. And, since the app can scale on a mobile device, users can access their work anywhere, on the go. The tool, available starting today, is one of more than 50 new features the flagship Photoshop desktop app offers in CC (creative cloud) 2018—the most powerful collection of updates for Photoshop in its 20-year history. "Adobe has always recognized technology as part of its DNA. It's at the heart of what we do to connect people with their stories and their creative ideas, including enabling them to express their passion on any device, at any time, for any project, and on any surface," said Curtis Rueda, Adobe vice president of enterprise product marketing. "Artists are reimagining the world through storytelling; they're designing the story of tomorrow. This ability to collaborate and review images together is a game-changing new approach." Earlier this year, CC launched a series of updates that reimagined important tools within Photoshop, Mac Lightroom, and other apps to work more effectively for creators on creative teams. For example, the Auto-Align command can be used to straighten and scale images, formats are now natively supported in Photoshop, and the ability to easily share creative work through iCloud is now a reality.

For example, you can choose from two new layouts for the main image view, depending on whether you're working on a single image or a collection of images, and three different Interface options to help you start editing right away. Three Filter windows are now part of the interface, two that instantly apply a custom tone curve, and one that instantly changes an image's contrast, brightness, or gamma. Another neat new feature, called "Export as," lets you create a web gallery or sidecar viewer with a single click. Perhaps the most exciting new feature is a new editing workspace called introduced in the new look. It's a space for creative control that lets you select tools or apply intelligent effects—like instant soft focus—with just a few clicks. It also improves the performance of your interface, and supports drag-and-drop with other applications like Adobe Capture. For photographers, the update also makes it easier to access and manage metadata, and includes new tools to add comments to your photos in Lightroom. At the same time, you can change your camera settings with the new "Camera Profiles" panel. And for those who work with layers and masks, Noise Ninja 3 brings new coloring tools, Merge to Lightroom, and a new look for masks. We'll follow up with the complete list soon, and of course, we'll be sure to create additional Black Friday deals for Photoshop, Lightroom, and Capture that'll make you forget about competing brands. Available for download now, the new Share for Review feature gives you the ability to collaborate in Photoshop without leaving the application. By attaching a link within Photoshop that goes with the image, you can open the image for review and edits where you are, or at a later point, even sync back to Photoshop once you're home or on the go.
